

Hey everyone. I want to remind you that next Monday (October 13) the Bay Area Geophysical Society, along with the Stanford University SEG Student Society, will be co-hosting the Fall SEG/AAPG Distinguished Lecturer, Dave Hale, at 4:15 in Room 380 of the Mitchell Building on the Stanford Campus. The flier with Dave's abstract and biography is attached to this email. If you can't make it to the talk in person but would like to view online as a webinar, please let me know either at this email address or at dalumbaugh@neosgeo.com so that I can set it up.

Also I want to let you know that we have been working on the web site (www.bayareageophysicalsociety.org). First we have added a 'Resources' page where previous BAGS newsletters can be found, continuing education courses offered by other non-profit organizations are listed, geophysics related jobs available in the Bay Area are posted, and people looking for jobs can post their resume. If you would like to post something on this page, please send it to us at officers@bayareageophysicalsociety.org. Second, we have begun to post photos taken during past BAGS events. Currently the photos can be viewed by going to the Calendar, scrolling down to and clicking on the 'Previous Events' link, and clicking on one of the previous events. And last, you can now donate money to BAGS over and above your normal dues, or become a cooperate sponsor, via a pay pal link that can be found on the ABOUT US/SPONSORS page. So please check out the web page if you haven't done so already, and if you have any suggestions of changes or features you would like to see, send us a note.

And we hope to see you next week at Dave Hale's talk.

Cheers

David Alumbaugh

President, Bay Area Geophysical Society
